FAITH IN ARIZONA MINES

The faith of Arizona people in Arizona mining is shown by the intense excitement in stock quotation reports in almost every mining city in the state. The first thing the miners and smelter men do when they get off shift is to hurry away to learn the latest fluctuations in the stock market, for they have their money invested there. Fortunate is the office clerk who can steal away for a few minutes now and then to obtain the latest quotation and compute his earnings.

Since the magical boom that sent the price of copper skyward, there has been an intense rush in the development of properties and the miners of Arizona have been putting their savings into Arizona stocks. Nothing speaks better for the permanent prosperity of the state than the absolute faith of Arizona miners in Arizona mining.

Poor Carranza! He feels that he is more in danger from his own people than from Americans.

FIRST AID CONTEST

Inasmuch as the time is approaching when plans must be formulated for the Annual First and Holmes Contest for the State of Arizona, the question of rules governing such contests is of utmost importance. A short time ago Mr. J. T. Moore, Safety Inspector of the Ray Consolidated and Secretary of the Southwestern Mine Safety Association, proposed a new set of rules governing first aid contests, which rules have been largely adopted by the United States Bureau of Mines for a standard set, and will undoubtedly be adopted by Arizona to govern its contests.

These rules have been published as Bulletin No. 28 of the Arizona State Bureau of Mines, copies of which may be secured by addressing Charles F. Willis, Director, Arizona State Bureau of Mines, Tucson, Arizona.

It's easier for trouble to find your address than it is for good luck.
